

Integrating Technology in the Sixth Grade Curriculum Website: Project Feedback

Peer Feedback:

1. Your site is really visually exciting. Using the CARP model, your site seems to fit all the criteria as a great example.

Your contrast works well with the bright colors. The photos set apart nicely with the red borders.

Your alignment makes your site easy to read. It complements your content.

Your site has a consistent look throughout. The repetitive use of your color scheme keeps me interested, but does not overpower your content (a contrast element, but I think the colors are so cool).

Your elements' proximity makes navigating easy. Your sections are easily distinguished, as are your lessons.

I think you need to add more content because it is so great to look at. The colors are reminiscent of a Mondrian painting. I really like the design of your site.

-Karl

2. This presentation was well thought out, as was the project, and very easy to follow and understand. The hand out was very professional and also easy to follow and understand. This staff development meeting would allow any attendee to go back to their site and begin working with these tools immediately regardless of their current abilities. Each person in your group spoke with confidence on their assigned topics. This showed great overall knowledge by each of the presenters. Great job.

-group 4

Faculty Feedback:

Good job solving the text color issue, the color separation on the title bar is a nice touch and follows in line with the overall design. Your resource provides a clear overview of what it provides, why it provides it, and how. The comprehensive and thoughtful overview is supported by detailed original lesson plans. It would be ideal to use all of your own original tutorials, but the detailed lesson plans and screen caps display your ability to create custom material. There are some minor inconsistencies with type and subheads from page to page, but the consistency of the design overall is very strong. There is a logical change from the design of the home page to secondary pages, it may have been too much to keep the image on all pages. This strategy also encourages the user to focus on the content. Your hard work and dedication to the project is apparent. Excellent work.

-Diana